"The energy challenge facing California is real. Every California needs to take immediate action to reduce energy consumption. For a list of simple ways you can reduce demand and cut your energy costs, see our Web-site at <http://www.srbc.ca.gov>"

The above discussion is provided for general information. For more specific information concerning water rights, please contact an attorney or appropriate authorities.

An appropriate right is required for use of water on nonirrigated land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by irrigation water users. Since 1941, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. Appropriate rights can be granted to waters "foregin" to the natural stream system.

Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or divert water which originates in a different watershed, water previously stored by others, return flows from use of groundwater, or other "foreign" water to the natural stream.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land and must be in the same watershed as the water source and must never have been severed from the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without the consent of the riparian owner.

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

An appropriate right is required for use of water on non-prior claim land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriate rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by prior claim water users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. Appropriate rights can be granted to waters "foreign" to the natural stream system.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water from his riparian land. Riparian land must be in the same watershed as the water source and must never have been severed from the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without reservation of the riparian right to the severed parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other users.

Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or "foreign" water to the natural stream a different watershed, water previously stored by others, return flows from use of groundwater, or other "foreign" water to the natural stream.
